

Turn My Head

Duncan James

Cut the walls again,
Feel my body,
It's a shame,
This time you said it all,
Trying not to break,
Your words let you down,
There's no need to blame,
And that's the fire bright,
To the clouds,
To your flame,

You really turn my head,
With all the crazy messed up things you said,
And everytime you speak,
Your lies so well,
My heart lies broken at your feet,

So let me confess,
Cause I don't need to hide,
To solve this mystery,
That you've build,
All the lies,
Oh let my burden down,
Makes me feel so strange,
Open up my heart,
And trying to find love again,

You really turn my head,
With all the crazy messed up things you said,
And everytime you speak,
Your lies so well,
My heart lies broken at your feet,

So long you played your game,
I'm sick and tired of always being left,
You really turn my head,
You really turn my head,
It's strange to fall of jealousy,
Another love shall fall,
You made me hours blind,

You really turn my head,
With all the crazy messed up things you said,
And everytime you speak,
Your lies so well,
My heart lies broken at your feet,

So long you played your game,
I'm sick and tired of always being left,
You really turn my head,
You really turn my head,
You really turn my head,
