

Foreverest

Dwellings

Tears running down her cheek
Are colder than the peak of Mount Everest
Oh, we both know
We both know who we are
I do not know how long this body will hold on
No longer than a moment that could last forever

Could last, could last forever
Could last, could last

The tears running down her cheek
Are colder than the peak of Mount Everest
Oh, we both know
We both know who we are
I do not know how long this body will hold on
No longer than a moment that could last forever

My soul swam out to sea, trapped in the waves
Good thing it doesn't need to breathe, oh
I put our hearts together with solder
My lungs might not fill up with water, oh
Your life may seem to be struggling
But I promise you it gets better, oh
You're knee-deep in rain that's coated in pain
Don't blame the weather

The tears running down her cheek
Are colder than the peak of Mount Everest
Oh, we both know
We both know who we are
I do not know how long this body will hold on
No longer than a moment that could last forever

You're frozen
You're colder than a mountain top
I would like to see this stop
But I can't get everything that I want

I know you're trying to buy some time
I know that it's not a crime
I don't mind, I don't mind
No, no

The tears running down her cheek
Are colder than the peak of Mount Everest
Oh, we both know
We both know who we are
I do not know how long this body will hold on
No longer than a moment that could last forever