

Serrated

Dwellings

Say what you want
I don't care
I let it sink in that you victimised the demon I've been drinking
It's like grinding my teeth
And pulling your hair
Split up into dreams, embellishing things, you claim to be a nightmare

I see
It changing you
You're second-guessing all the time, you
You pass the blame right over their shoulders and over their heads until they forget

You're like a thorn in my side
That I cannot hide from, and will not deny it
When you hear your only fear intoxicated
The thorns feel serrated
It's an issue
Tearing through the tissue of my body
The [?], it always feels like throbbing
And I know that it's only the beginning
Only the beginning

I see
It changing you
You're second-guessing all the time, you
You pass the blame right over their shoulders and over their heads until they forget
They forget, they forget
And they regret, they regret
And they regret, they regret, they regret

Say what you want
I don't care
I let it sink in that you become the demon I've been drinking
It's like gritting my teeth
And pulling your head
Split up into dreams
You claim to be a nightmare