

Throughout All Time

Dwight Yoakam

I'll still see you walking, silently
Through the shadows in my mind
A vision of your sweet blue eyes
Creeps into my dreamful sleep at night
You still haunt the deepness of my memories
I guess you will throughout all time

Little girl I still remember
The very dress you wore on that day
It was so soft, a shade of violet, Lord
How it took my breath away

As the sunshine of the morning
Broke across your golden hair
How I wished to hold you tightly, Lord
But I was shy and did not dare

I'll still see you walking, silently
Through the shadows in my mind
A vision of your sweet blue eyes
Creeps into my dreamful sleep at night
You still haunt the deepness of my memories
I guess you will throughout all time

Many nights I've sat and wondered
If you might be somebody's wife
But if you're not, I'd long to see you
If just to tell you how I've pined

I've been known to ask a stranger
That I thought might just pass your way
If they would tell you of these feelings
That we might meet again someday

I'll still see you walking, silently
Through the shadows in my mind
A vision of your sweet blue eyes
Creeps into my dreamful sleep at night
You still haunt the deepness of my memories
I guess you will throughout all time

You still haunt the deepness of my memories
I guess you will throughout all time

I guess you will throughout all time...
