

No Better Time

Dylan Gossett

Well a quarter in a fountain means that people still have dreams

And a token in a pocket means that people can come clean

So come on now, boy, don't you be afraid to start

'Cause sweat on your skin's better than regret on your heart

Well the wrinkles on your face from regret-filled days

Your eyes tell the story of a place far away

And if you don't bleed now you'll forever have to pay

You're not living unless you're willing to do some dying along the way

And if you can't see now then you'll find out one day

When your hands are getting weak and you're fading away

Take these words here now, let 'em be your saving grace

Ain't no better time than today

Take them hits on your sleeve and wear them proud

You're the only one around you that truly knows how

Save them tears for a day where you'll need 'em

Like the times when you come home not the times when you're leaving

And if you can't see now then you'll find out one day

When your hands are getting weak and you're fading away

Take these words here now, let 'em be your saving grace

Ain't no better time than today

Well if you can't see now, you'll find out one day

When your hands are getting weak and you're fading away

Take these words here now, let 'em be your saving grace

Ain't no better time than today
