The Beginning

She put on her party dress I put on my jacket and walked out the door

Didn't have nowhere to go Didn't matter that the night was getting cold

Pulled her closer to me To keep her warm And everything was beautiful and free In the beginning

She woke up late in the morning I pulled the curtain back The sun came pouring in

There was no one in the world There was nothing else just me and my girl

She put her arms around me gave me a kiss And everything was beautiful and free In the beginning
