I can't imagine any other way than simply saying why I really feel this way it's mystifying in each and every sense so nothing ventured no thing new to gain

Slowly life keeps moving on before you know it's gone the chance to say what's on your mind

My lips are drying up because of guilt no point in crying once the blood is spilt no good denying what is wrong or right time has a way of healing everything in sight

Don't forsake the broken hearted wishful thoughts and proud id eals finish what you've already started and one day you'll blessed with the power to reach the ones you trust

Who ever listens every word in vain family connections goes ag ainst the grain takes some persuasion trying to break through advice worth del aying

when starting over new