

Hydrangeas

Ellie Holcomb

See the green on the trees
Hear the birds in the breeze
Watch the flowers, the colors bright
Spring sings the song of the world coming back alive

The hydrangeas that we cut down
They're rising up again out of the ground
And the sun warms our skin
Spring sings the song of the world come alive again

The old maple in our backyard
She seemed to take this winter hard
But now she's dressed in a brilliant gown of green
She dances on to the song of the spring

When the winter feel too long
We remember spring will sing the song
Of the best surprise the world has ever known
Oh Jesus died but came alive to bring us home
