

A storm of valiant herons was heading to the warm
Against crystalline blue sky in that afternoon stillborn
A crack into the light beams
A yell suddenly shattered all the laughs
Motionless the fibres, paralysed in fear
Staring from the distance, craved to disappear
The child who wished to be a poet
Hadn't yet become a grown-up man

And when the skies are falling
All the stars start falling down
With any signs of warning
Explode in sparkles with no sound, yeah

We were young, we were lone, we were helpless
We were gone in a blink, we have run afar
And to no one's avail
We have fled in neglect in a bath of stars

Crippled by the reverence, frozen and awry
In the sheer and utter darkness, in the night side of the sky
There he stood a lonely weak boy
Destroyed by detriment and ignorance

And when the skies are falling
All the stars start falling down
With any signs of warning
Explode in sparkles with no sound

We were young, we were lone, we were helpless
We were gone in a blink, we have run afar
And to no one's avail
We have fled in neglect in a bath of stars
We were young, we were lone, we were helpless
We were gone in a blink, we have run afar
And to no one's avail
We have fled in neglect in a bath of stars

(Of stars)
(Starbath)

We were young, we were lone, we were helpless (Helpless)
We were gone in a blink, we have run afar
And to no one's avail
We have fled in neglect in a bath of stars
We were young, we were lone, we were helpless (Helpless)
We were gone in a blink, we have run afar
And to no one's avail
We have fled in neglect in a bath of stars