

The Wall

Ember Falls

Unbreakable
I brave the fall
I will stay at the gate and forever hold the door

Never spoken a word
Of the lessons unlearned
Of the times I've strayed
All the bridges I've burned

Through the dust
I reflect my disgust
And this sentence is cruel but just
I just can't feel your touch
And my hands are too worn to trust

Unbreakable
I brave the fall
I will stay at the gate and forever hold the door
Unbreakable
I wait in the cold of the wall, the wall, the wall

As the hourglass turns
And the poetry burns
See the song of my heart
Never woven to words

Through the dust
I arrive at the cusp
Of the river that we all cross
Of the river that we all cross

No light beyond the wall
No light beyond the wall

No sight beyond the fatalist and fragile
Tunnel vision to the withering core of the soul

Cultivating the empty shell of my private hell
With every sorry step I take Never letting the weight of sin come crashing in
I will never break

I'm so tired
Soon expired
I'm so tired
Soon expired
I'm so broken
All left unspoken

It's not. for. my eyes. to deviate
From. this. dark-ness. that I create
Not. for. my voice. to resonate
Out. from. this. wall of mine it's
Not. for. my eyes. to deviate
From. this. dark-ness. that I create
Not. for. my voice. to resonate
Out. of. this. wall of mine it's...

Unbreakable
Unbreakable
I will stay at the gate and forever hold the door
No light beyond the wall

Unbreakable
I brave the fall
I will stay at the gate and forever hold the door
Unbreakable
I wait in the cold of the wall, the wall, the wall

No light beyond the wall
No light beyond the wall
No light beyond the wall
No light beyond the wall
No light beyond the wall