

Another Life

Emerson Hart

So this is what you're made of
Half of what you've always been
With a future you're afraid of
And a past that nearly did you in
There's no running as the colors start to turn
There's no hiding from the lessons you'll learn
We said forever
We crashed together
But we knew better
We thought the stars we named were ours
But now we're older
And starting over
Is so much harder this time
Waiting on another life
Like a city in the daylight
You finally see what's underneath
And I remember what it felt like
You and I can't deny
You're not who you used to be
There's no running as the colors start to turn
There's no hiding from the lessons you'll learn
We said forever

We crashed together
But we knew better
We thought the stars we named were ours
But now we're older
And starting over
Is so much harder this time
Waiting on another life
In another life
I could make this go away
In another life
I would know just what to say
And it would be alright
'Cause it would be another way
In another life
In another life
We said forever
We crashed together
But we knew better
We thought the stars we named were ours
But now we're older
And starting over
Is so much harder this time
Waiting on another life
Waiting on another life
But now we're older
And starting over
Is so much harder this time
Waiting on another life