

The Archer

Empyrium

On damp ground he walks and lays the frost upon the meadows and the moss
The hunt of fall is on

The archer and his bow roam in the valleys cold Eleven brothers know again they`re getting old

Rain Wind Fire Ash
Snow Arch Mist Death

With a whistling ring his arrow cuts the haze and his freezing breath resounds through the calm days

As the wheel hangs low in snowy trees forlorn The archer and his kin know they shall be reborn