

Premonition

English Dogs

And now the messenger sees all
He is awaiting my death
World domination in his hand
To rule the kingdom called Earth
But I have foresight!

I see the downfall of evil
The dying of death
In spirit always he's with me
Although he can do no harm

I see in front of me the paradise of men's desires
Entry is barred for me, a sentinel, the guard in the night

His guard falls, the warrior beaten
Death brings a sickening blow
With stealth I enter the temple
Under the single white light
A dying old man!

He speaks and warns me of danger, but also of a choice

He offers me the whole temple
To be passed on before his death
But warns that fantasy will keep me there
Until my last breath

If I decide to try, my fantasy's the first in my head
With me, for eternity, it's tempting me, I cannot be led

The old man is dying and I must choose
Between desire and heart
He dies with one premonition
That I will live in my quest
And defeat the undead!

And so into the sun I ride
With foresight I'm led

Now armed with power in my mind
I now have equalled the score
The demons will have to face me
And learn to live by my law

Hear me, my enemy bow down to me, or prepare to die
Fight me, and you will see my victroy, I will rule the night
