The streets we walked down together, the kiss that was sweet
Eyes that were tender, breath that was fragrant
You warm hands and face, I'll never forget that
The whispers I loved, I'm trying to forget all

The meeting that was short and a heart who was always like a child
The cool gaze and dry voice
The figure that was looking back, the heart that was hurt
The hardest memories, it's all blown away

Now I can't see you again, like what has been said
But I'm going to forget you like that
How am I going to erase you from my life, from our time together?
Our memories, how am I going to abandon that?

You resemble a habit, the word loses its meaning
The painfully cold silence in my heart and the unwillingness in my smile
A movement mixed with sigh, a cold voice tone
The moments have stopped, I quickly erase it

Now I can't see you again, like what has been said
But you're going to forget me like that
How am I going to erase you from my life, from our time together?

It's all merely my heart felt sorry
Without the strength to let you go
I truly believe that you're happy

You're not going to find me again for the second time, like what you've said
But you're coming back to me just like that
How am I going to erase you from my life?

Now I can't see you again, like what has been said
But you're going to forget me just like that
How can I erase you from my life, from our time together?
How can I abandon our memories?
