You Hurt Me (And I Hate You)

Eurythmics

Well the sun came up this morning Like a burning red balloon It broke into my window And it slipped across the room It spread itself upon me Like the smell of sweet perfume I was sleeping like a baby

I'm not a saviour I'm not a saint I'm not an angel I'm not that quaint

Don't need a preacher To be that wise Don't need a teacher -I've got my eyes...

You hurt me & I hate you You hurt me

A history of bitterness You have left a blazing trail If you had been a hammer I'd be a broken nail You gave me nothing -Nothing but regrets Don't think it's over -It's not over yet

You hurt me & I hate you You hurt me...

And everytime You try to fool yourself You've only got yourself To blame And every lie you ever Told yourself Will all come back to you One day

They say there's no hell on earth That's like a woman scorned And if you have to face this hell You'll wish you'd not been born And if you have to face this hell You'll find me standing there In the shadows, in the corners At the foot of every stair
