

Fighting For

Evan Honer

This is a disaster I'm seeking out closure
But tonight I'll run past her
And it's 2:00 am and the bed gets colder
With the thought of the last guy that had her
And it's not my place so I bite my tongue
But that smile ain't the same since that bastard
So I fill her cup just to ease the pain
And she laughs it off says it doesn't even matter

But when it's all over dear I'll be staring at the ceiling
Too damn scared to share my feelings
But that man will leave you bleeding on the floor
And I ain't one to judge, I just Hope you know what you're fighting for

Woah, woah

Well the sun starts rising but it's not what wakes me
I get up from the sound of her crying
On the bathroom floor but I leave her place
Before her tears have a chance to start drying
Then its back to the old me I'm stuck in this routine
I get lost in the thought of me losing
The one I loved so I'm compromising
And tonight you're the vice that I'm choosing

But when it's all over dear I'll be staring at the ceiling
Too damn scared to share my feelings
But that girl she left me bleeding on the floor
And I ain't one to fuss I just Never know what I'm fighting for

Woah, woah

Were both in the wrong here we both had a bad year were searching for something
We both been broken and we'll leave it unspoken we'll say that it's nothing

But when it's all over dear we'll be staring at the ceiling
Too damn scared to share our feelings
But our past it left us bleeding on the floor
And we ain't one to fuss we just Never know what were fighting for