

lead role

Evan Honer

I got the lead role to a part I never wanted
In a movie where the guy lets down the girl in the end
I don't mean to spoil it but the story lines not all that important

Well it would be if he had realized what he had when had it

And the writers don't seem fond of this guy 'cause every line w as wrong or a lie
And the plot keeps on changing makes it hard to understand

How a person, so underserving
Finds a girl that believes in him at his lowest point
For the long haul, frequent drunk calls
Now he's trying to remember her voice
But three years later he plays it cool never mentions her name
And she always wondered why he let her go
And three years later, he's wondering the same

They casted poorly not a fan of the new love interest Seems to only bring him back and compare what he had Reviews are mixed on this, there's plot holes that can't be dis missed
An audience not fully convinced and everyone trying to understa nd

How a person, so underserving
Finds a girl that believes in him at his lowest point
For the long haul, frequent drunk calls
Now he's trying to remember her voice
But three years later he plays it cool never mentions her name
And she always wondered why he let her go
And three years later, he's wondering the same