

Enucleation

Exhumed

Fastened down and secured to the operating table, With scalpels and cutlery I will work upon your aesthetics, A most afflictive process you a re made to endure, Without the solacing service of a general anesthetic...
Forcibly
penetrating the palpebra, I gouge and cut into the ciliary body , Severing the nerve, your eye is knocked from its orbit, As you can plainly s ee...
Dissatisfied with your over all being, I formulate a plan of op eration, A large incision into the abdomen is made, To perform general enu cleation... I give you an apendectomy, Removing organs unnecessary, A spare k idney is excised, In pain you writhe... (chorus) I slice the renal arter
y, Gastro-intestinalotomy, Digestive tract dislocation, Subjected to enucleation... With monocular vision you can now regard, The co nstituents of your gut I have displaced, Depurating the shell, your thorax be autifully
carved, Your abdomen now a barren landscape... Fracturing the r ib cage with a raspatory, As your gullet is gorged with sanguineous mucosputter, Not yet complete curtailing your anatomy, I delve to the heart of the m atter...
Exhuming your entrails, Discarded organs grow stale, Severing t he ventricle,
Your heart I cull... chorus...
