Exhumed

A gleaming vision of the human essence displayed...

Beyond the pretenses of aesthetic appraisal
Design and decomposition mesh
Each sanguine sinew and tendon lay revealed
Another world that lay beneath the flesh...

A study in still lifelessness
What has become of the deceased
From the death artist's bucket of blood
My latest masterpiece...

A ruddy complexion is the natural result
When the clotted blood congeals in the cheeks
Though my latest victim has not yet begun to decay
The escaping rectal vapor still reeks...

To transform a stiff into a work of art
Is a daunting task to undertake, I confess
Rearranging the broken limbs can be quite a chore
But hacking up innards arouses me best...

A study in still lifelessness
What has become of the deceased
From the death artist's bucket of blood
My latest masterpiece...

It was his fatal misfortune to consent to be my model
Though the end result was likely not as he preconceived
A hasty pulverization of the cranium left him senseless
And with a single incision of the throat, of his life he was relieved...

Viscous bodily excretions act to revitalize my empty canvas
A work in my preferred medium - that of the human carcass
Soon this macabre masterpiece will begin to decompose
Until then your mutilated cadaver strikes a lovely pose...

Forceps, pins and scalpels all come into play
As each layer of human dignity is crudely swept away
Barbed wire, entrails and sinews are skillfully intertwined
A half ransacked corpse in the store room left behind...

Skewered eyeballs and brain at last set in place
A leering putrid mockery of your once human face
Redefining aesthetic values with this visionary piece
Let art begin where life has ceased...

A study in still lifelessness
What has become of the deceased
From the death artist's bucket of blood
My latest masterpiece...
