Think For Yourself

Face to Face

you think you know just what it means to be alone you think you 've suffered for your cause you're wrong i don't really need to know what makes you tick or what you think is right i don't want to know the reason you believe right now you're like the oth ers your thoughts are not your own try thinking for yourself and act on what you know still you try to defend these things you were taught you've got to try to change the way you learn some times it feels just like i've burned every single bridge that i have ever crossed i always try to learn from all of these mist akes mistakes that i have made but pride is a worthy adversary in the struggle for yourself