

Down Lover's Lane Alone

Faron Young

I seem to see a shadow of heartaches and despair
I seem to hear your footsteps though I know they aren't there
Everything seems just the same except that you are gone
As I walk again all by myself down lover's lane alone
I hear the laughter in your voice a thing that will not die
And I see the teardrops in your eyes from times I made you cry
It's hard to realize that all these things are gone
As I walk again all by myself down lover's lane alone
Perhaps someday as time goes by I'll love again and yet
There are some things and it takes more than a lifetime to forget
You brought me laughter love and joy now all these things are gone
As I walk again all by myself down lover's lane alone
And yet they tell me someday I will find myself again
That God above will call me from this world of false and sin
That I will find true happiness and love I never known
And never have to walk again down lover's lane alone