

Shape of Trust

Fear, and Loathing in Las Vegas

What did you gain
What did you lose
By looking for someone's real self
For yourself or the love of the person
Chasing to find fault of
(The) person

Oh We all have various faces various faces
At work, on, off duty, and so on

That's common sense
Being nosy
Knowing too much was just a self-fulfilling prophecy
It all ain't for the sake of that person

Just take it in
People being multi-faceted
Impossible to know
Impossible to know
Impossible to know
Impossible to know
Just believe the face that you see in front
It is nonsense to peek into others

Looking for the shape of
Looking for the shape of real trust
Wanna believe wanna hope that is true
Is that person real?

Is it a true one
Trust all the smiles you witness and
Take em in and
Take em in and take em in

Yeah ah not just looking (At) others but Look at (The) various faces you have
There may be (A) basic line of yourself
But all faces are real yeah
More or less they all should be

Self-pluralism
Self-complexity
Self-consistency
Self-concept clarity
Working self-concept, dynamic self-concept
Working self-concept, dynamic self-concept
Working self-concept

Social selves
Phenomenal selves
Hierarchy of selves
Though it may seem iridescent and uncertain
The light of the person's color is leaking
Which makes the person attractive

There is no way to fully find out
Who you really are but that is ok

That's not the place you will really
Find the real nature of trust
The feelings you give me
The feelings of trying to answer to the trust
Let me believe in it
To find what trust really is