

A Shoreline Perspective

Fear Before The March Of Flames

tonight ill lay here the tides call my name but the land spares the depths of the sea a
again youre waving you swore you could swim but what now when your feet wont touch the ground (do you remember who you used to be) my sweet youre drowning the shore beds my feet and theres no chance of me getting wet but i swear

as you scream ill laugh you scream "ironic" and beg for this fever to break or the sweet cascading waves to pull you down hey ocean floor look how she longs for you take her now for ive already left her for dead its a childish thing you do splashing in the water splashing

splashing
splashing
splashing

its a childish thing you do are you trying to..?