

Misery

Fear Of Domination

She's there
so innocent
standing alone
smiling or crying
and things that should've been known
all the time
all the pain
all the joy
she dwells so deep
that she will drown forcing herself into the deep end of the pool

365 days of pain can't go without a trace
but she knows better
and won't leave a mark
for me to follow
I can't see
I can't hear
but I can smell
she is rotting from inside slowly but surely the Misery walks along the path

And I can feel it through your eyes too many dreams are left behind all the pain that has been done so much misery it burns

And I can feel it in your eyes all the agony inside too many words are left untold you never leave me alone
