Century

I fought my feelings and got in the way Could've been easier like a decade of days Projection, young marriage, lighting the stage I wanted feelings, that got in my own way

Then wrote that letter that had nothing to say Staccato vision like a kingdom of days All lonely, or not lonely, century away But still a vision as if help's on its way

Someone who will lead you to someone Who will lead you to someone Who will lead you to the one At the end of the century

The air is clearer a decade away Singing to a mountain that was empty all along All lonely, young marriage lighting the way She wanted feelings that got in her own way

Someone who will lead you to someone Who will lead you to someone Who will lead you to the one At the end of the century

Someone who will lead you to someone Who will lead you to someone Who will lead you to the one At the end of the century

Someone who will lead you to someone Who will lead you to someone Who will lead you to the one At the end of the century

A century, how long is that? Three billion, one hundred and fifty five million Nine hundred and seventy three thousand, six hundred seconds Eight hundred and seventy six million hours Or thirty six thousand, five hundred days Almost as long as one of those endless dark nights of the soul Those nights that never end When you believe you'll never see the sun rise again When a single second feels like a century

A century (x9)