

Walking the Crowpath

Fen

With the scent of damp ground and woodsmoke,
Nature's incense unfurls
Sated by carrion, the watchers land and gather
Branches hang heavy as they observe
For their memory, for their pain,
For their very essence I walk the Crowpath