

Maybe Another Time

Feng Suave

The sunlight stabs my eyes
There's birds perching on the powerlines
And I wonder if you woke in someone's arms
And if you'd ever consider mine

The swaying shades of acacias in flower arrangements suggest
That it's time for me to be a man
Or else with what regrets
Would I be left to live forever?

The sky's undisturbed like a static pond
Oh world, may you be preserved just as you are when I return?
The scent of evening air is cinnamon sweet here
But it's lost on my lungs and breathing in

The sunlight stabs my eyes (It stabs my eyes)
There's ferns running up the traffic signs outside (Outside)
Well, I tell the ether all of my desires and she says
"Maybe (Maybe, maybe) another time"
