

North

Fly By Midnight

Deep dive off the coast of my feelings
Been a year and a half of overthinking
Getting tired of nights that are cold
Take a windbreaker jacket for the road
Now I know
Now I know

Sideways and full of indecision
I'm a rock at the bottom and I'm sinking
Looking through a darkness that I've never known
At the end of the day yeah what's there to say

I was supposed to fall apart
I was supposed to grab the keys and take my car
But there you were
There you are

I thought this had to leave my body
I thought I had to let it run its course
Whatever I've been through the moment I see you
Things start looking north
I've always had the wrong somebody
I've never met a you like this before
Whatever I've been through ends when I see you
Things start looking north

I've been locked in a one person view
It's like I can't rearrange what I'm used to Hit the switch, flip a coin, change my clothes
Guess we're close to content but I'm still pretty bad

I'm supposed to fall apart
I'm supposed to grab the keys and take my car
But there you were
There you are

I thought this had to leave my body
I thought I had to let it run its course
Whatever I've been through the moment I see you
Things start looking north
I've always had the wrong somebody
I've never met a you like this before
Whatever I've been through ends when I see you
Things start looking north

Oh-oh-oh
Oh-oh-oh
Oh-oh-oh
Oh-oh-oh

I thought this had to leave my body
I thought I had to let it run its course
Whatever I've been through the moment I see you (the moment I see you)
Things start looking north
I've always had the wrong somebody (somebody)
I've never met a you like this before
Whatever I've been through ends when I see you

Things start looking north
