

I Hope You Know

Forest Blakk

A backpack full of lonely on a morning train
I stepped onto a platform in the sun
Your smile soothed my brokenness like poetry
The only part of my heart that wasn't numb

Well different blood
Never stopped you
From choosing love
Instead of letting go

I hope you know
There's a part of you that lives in every note
And every step I take along these broken roads
That I've been walking
And the time between us talking
Is so much longer now
But I still call you home
I hope you know

Like a lighthouse guiding ships into the harbor
Cutting through the dark so I could see
I was just a sinking suit of armor
I was lost till you saw the best in me

I hope you know
There's a part of you that lives in every note
And every step I take along these broken roads
That I've been walking
And the time between us talking
Is so much longer now
But I still call you home
I hope you know

Different blood
Never stopped you
From choosing love
Instead of letting go

I hope you know
There's a part of you that lives in every note
And if for some reason you don't

I hope you know
I hope you know you're with me everywhere I go
And I just called to hear your voice
Because the road that I've been walking
And the time between us talking
Is so much longer now
But I still call you home
I hope you know
