

Goodbye (She Quietly Says)

Frank Sinatra

There is no great big ending, no sunset in the sky
There is no string ensemble, and she doesn't even cry
And just as I begin to say that we should make another try
She reaches out across the table looks at me and quietly says g ood-bye
There is no big explosion, no tempest in the tea
The world does not stop turning round, there's no big tragedy Sitting in a coffee shop with cheesecake and some apple pie
She reaches out across the table looks at me and quietly says g ood-bye
Good-bye, said so easily, Good-bye, said so quietly Good-bye, good-bye, goodbye, just two always strangers avoid each other's eyes One still make believing, one still telling lies, she tells me that I'm not to blame
But when I ask the reason why
She reaches out across the table looks at me and quietly says g ood-bye
Good-bye, good-bye, good-bye
She reaches out across the table looks at me and quietly says g ood-bye
