

Smithereens

Gene Watson

All I'd ever wanted, all I'd ever need
I had right here every night
In one moment of weakness, her love I betrayed
Now I'm lying here alone every night in the bed I made

Oh, and I still feel the heat from the fire in her eyes
When the plain unfaithful truth rose above our love, my lies
I handed her the bomb, then she dropped it right on me
And the love I cheated on was blown to smithereens

Without her, I'm nothing, I'm just taking up space
I wake up every morning just to die for the rest of the day
It's a sad situation, it's a crying shame
Made worse by the fact that I've only myself to blame

Oh, and I still feel the heat from the fire in her eyes
When the plain unfaithful truth rose above our love, my lies
I handed her the bomb, then she dropped it right on me
And the love I cheated on was blown to smithereens

Just like that, I self-destructed
I paid a price so high, it busted me
And all those memories left behind
Will haunt me 'til the day they bury me
Six foot deep

Oh, and I still feel the heat from the fire in her eyes
When the plain unfaithful truth rose above our love, my lies
I handed her the bomb, then she dropped it right on me
And the love I cheated on was blown to smithereens
