

Thunderbolts Of The Gods

Graveland

Red fire filled the sky
When it hit the ground
The land and and sea trembled
Nightmare descended from the sky
Carrying the fire hotter than the sun
Fire snakes and red dragons
Crawled up from the bowels of the earth
Wounded by the fire of Gods
Furious roar of the beasts
Boomed in the impenetrable clouds of smoke
From the depths of the universe
Angry Gods arrived
Fire wind writhed
In the clouds of rain of the ash
There was no longer visible
When day begins and when night falls
Fiery red aurora
Barely illuminated the omnipresent gloom
And only thunders of lightning thrown by the Gods were heard
The roar of their chariots
Deafened winds and tornadoes
Under the covered sun
Beasts and ghosts feast
Fire sword cut through the air
Shining spear pierced the mountain
Fiery chariot circled
At the ground behind it burned with bloody red
Red Dragon ripped the darkness to shreds
Are a dead matter
His eyes were on fire by the light of a thousand suns!
Inciting winds that wiped all the dust
When the chariots turned back north
Night reined not permeated
No stars could be seen
The air turned to ash
Then rose the ocean
High in the heavens
In the impenetrable darkness
Consume countless lands
