

A Bird Flew Inside the House

Great Lake Swimmers

A bird flew inside the house
To remind me of a promise I made to myself to keep
Poison from the well and serpents from the nest
Everything's in danger and heaven means hell

Thoughts become concrete and turn into needs
Inside it won't last through the gathering speed
Forest surrounds and it's soothing
Take a deep breath and keep moving

I'm in someone else's shoes
And I hear no good in the news
And I have nothing to lose
Everything's in danger
And heaven means hell

Over the highways and in between aisles
I'm into the woods so deep
Tough as a winter freeze, light as maple kiss
Where I will learn my key

I'm in someone else's shoes
And I hear no good in the news
But I have nothing to lose
Everything's in danger
And heaven means hell

I'm in someone else's shoes
And I hear no good in the news
Everything's in danger
