

In The Mirror

Greg Graffin

Your arrogance! It will surely bring you down
Is there a judgement appropriate for you
That you spit at others? Look hard in the mirror
Then in ten years look again
There will be lines, sags, and rashes
But you'll have come no further than where you are today

Still helpless, all the while protracting
Your imminent demise, and feigning superiority
There will be a trail of those you have injured
And made worse by your vicious acts of greed
Without regard you piece of shit!

Look in the mirror
There you'll see the light
There will come a day
There you'll see the truth of your way
