

Too Young to Love

Greg Lake

I was a fool tonight.
Ooh, I should've seen the light.
'Cause you were too young to be loved.

I should've turned away,
though you were begging me to stay.
'Cause you were too young to be loved.

I'm all alone tonight,
send your love by satellite.
I just don't care what they say,
you're too young, you're too young.

Ooh, what a night it was.
I couldn't help myself because you were too young to be loved.

You were a staged up dream.
Come here, get in this limousin.
Just lay down low,
nobody's gonna know who you are.

If making love's a crime,
I'm gonna end up doing time.
There ain't no way that you can be mine,
you're too young.

When I'm alone in the morning light,
you've gone away.
I still remember the way that you felt,
the way you lay.
And again and again in the night
you reappear.
'Cause you've been living in all of my dreams,
but you're not here.

You're too young.
You're too young.
You're too young.
You're too young.

I'm all alone tonight,
send your love by satellite.
I just don't care what they say,
you're too young.

I can't hold on anymore,
Why didn't somebody tell me before?

You're too young.
You're too young.
You're too young.
You're too young.
