

Bigger Than Me

Gretta Ray

My house is a hotel room in the inner city of a place I don't know well
But I'm shown the ropes, to try to tame the vertigo
Morning is a runway, speed, thirty thousand feet
I'm living sky-high
On to the next thing, and so it goes
I entertain rest, but I don't

When you think like you dream
Nothing's an impossibility
Through a particoloured lens is how I see
And never too far out of reach
I feel a force waiting patiently
Ready to take the lead
'Cause it's bigger than me

This love hit without a warning
Took control and it has dawned on me that it's all I need
This is bigger than me
This love will never be a makeshift state of mind
Held hostage, not an off switch that one could find you see
For this is bigger than me

My work is a night shift spent stood underneath lights so blinding
But all-inspiring immersed in sound
While elevated above the ground
My view is a human sea
Though the water's rough, it's unoffending and never ending with a roar so loud
I live in awe in the here and now

When you think like you dream
Nothing's an impossibility
Tend to the beast I feed
'Cause it's bigger than me

This love hit without a warning
Took control and it has dawned on me that it's all I need
This is bigger than me
This love will never be a makeshift state of mind
Held hostage, not an off switch that one could find you see
For this is bigger than me

Held hostage
No off switch
Held hostage
No off switch

When you think like you dream
Nothing's an impossibility
Tend to the beast I feed

This love hit without a warning
Took control and it has dawned on me that it's all I need
This is bigger than me
This love will never be a makeshift state of mind
Held hostage, not an off switch that one could find you see
For this is bigger than me

Held hostage
No off switch
Held hostage
No off switch
