An Inverse Self-Reflection

Greyhaven

And suddenly I find just who I am inside
I had to break outside the layers of my design
(Break out to realign)

Sifting through the glass we start again
Everything that finds you stands between us
The less you open up to it, the more it keeps you in

Reflections dead and gone
Shattered and released we are connected
The more you try and run from it, the closer it becomes

It's apart of everything
Undone and done again
It's apart of everything here

And suddenly I find just who I am inside
I had to break outside the layers of my design
I'll never know if I had ever lived my life
I had to find my own way through

Our faces turn and back away
Pale shadow seems to dance around us
The more you to try and talk to it, the less it has to say

Exit through the light outside again
Back and forth we find ourselves within us
The more we try and separate, the closer we become

It's apart of everything
Undone and done again
It's apart of everything here

Our lives strewn across the thresholds of permanence
In vessels of temporal importance
And we're swallowed up in endless sprawling death

Undone and done again

Structured belly of the beast
You are encased and then released
Devouring endlessly it feasts
It's billowing up again

Structured belly of the beast
You are encased and then released
Devouring endlessly it feasts
It's billowing up again
