

Calm Surrender

Grizfolk

There's a highway on the coastline pointed at the moon
Like a memory at midnight in the middle of June
We were lost but we were floating in a dream we were living through
To be young, to be unknowing

Like endless seas of calm surrender
I need you now more than ever
Past the horizon, something better
I need you now more than ever

There's a fading purple skyline that falls into the sea
When I close my eyes I still find a reason to believe
We were lost but we were floating in a dream we were living through
To be young, to be unknowing

Like endless seas of calm surrender
I need you now more than ever
Past the horizon, something better
I need you now more than ever

I need you now more than ever
I need you now more than ever
I need you now more than ever
I need you now more than ever
