

Meteorite

Gus Dapperton

I look around me, nothing is the same
I make a puzzle of what still remains
It's like I don't remember who I am
So I keep untangling tangles, while I'm getting older
My feet are on the ground and the world feels colder
And now I wonder if I'll see you again

But when you're crushed by the patterns that come and go
And bleed into the centerfold
Remember the only thing that matters

I can feel you here, feel you there, feel you rock
Baby, I can feel your waves cross the space and the time
It hits me like a flood, like a stone, like a light, like a meteorite

(Meteorite)

I can feel you here, feel you there, feel you rock
Baby, I can feel your waves cross the space and the time
It hits me like a flood, like a stone, like a light, like a meteorite

(Meteorite)

Oh, length is dawn into the dusk
You spend it only if you must
But we never seem to have enough to try
You live with all the skeletons
I know I'm not the only one
I'd hate for them to have to come and die

But when you're crushed by the patterns that come and go
And bleed into the centerfold
Remember the only thing that matters

I can feel you here, feel you there, feel you rock
Baby, I can feel your waves cross the space and the time
It hits me like a flood, like a stone, like a light, like a meteorite

(Meteorite)

I can feel you here, feel you there, feel you rock
Baby, I can feel your waves cross the space and the time
It hits me like a flood, like a stone, like a light, like a meteorite
