

BREAKFAST

half•alive

I lay on the carpet
A wrench to let you in Carbonating emotion
Tears rising to the rim
I fled to the walls, yeah
Be sure I'm surrounded
(Where no one can find me)
But there's strength behind a lowered gate
(A humble embrace, a vulnerable place)

Say you're open through tears and trembling
It's a major step, it's okay to fret
Here's a safe place to lay your heart down
It's a second chance, it won't be your last

Letting my guard down
Enough to be held close
There's strength in the open
The broken and exposed
Should I flee to the mountains
Be sure I'm surrounded
(Where no one can find me)
The strength within an open space
(A humble place, a venerable place)

Say you're open through tears and trembling
It's a major step, it's okay to fret
Here's a safe place to lay your heart down
It's a second chance, it won't be your last
Say you're open through tears and trembling
It's a major step, it's okay to fret
Here's a safe place to lay your heart down
It's a second chance, it won't be your last