Flying Alone

Hammers of Misfortune

A thousand needles of fire, each pinprick the end of a dream
The cipher encrypted a key to escape in a flying machine

The landing bay consumed in flames
The cipher didn't lie this time, the engines engaged
One less victim of this crime, it's time to leave

This disaster behind

A thousand ships are on fire in the sky, above the inferno below
Are these the memories, the tears in my eyes, or is it the smoke?

My velox flies, my knuckles white upon the controls
The city ends as I ascend to stations unknown Flying faster, I take one last look back
I'll never see this place again

And no one will know, I'm flying alone
The city's destroyed, why say goodbye?
The faster I fly into the void

This fate belongs to no one else
So don't pretend that you know how it ends
