

Reading Your Mind

Hanson

Some day soon
When we're older
So much life won't pass us by
And on that day
I'll wash away
All those tear drops from your eyes
It's so hard
To be waiting
Thinking of the life we'll share
Love you still
Then you know I will
And every moment now until

No one needs to know
That I climb through your window
Each night under the stars
I'm reading your mind
You don't have to tell
But I don't want to hide it
I just need to see
That look in your eyes
When I'm reading your mind

Some may say
We're too young
To know why we feel so strong
But who are they
To say what is wrong
When they've never spend the night in your arms

When I feel you breathing
You make my dreams come true

No one needs to know
That I climb through your window
Each night under the stars
I'm reading your mind
You don't have to tell
But I don't want to hide it
I just need to see
That look in your eyes
When I'm reading your mind
Reading your mind

Some day
We won't have to part
Soon we'll be
Together, all day long
No more hiding

'Cause no one needs to know
That I climb through your window
I'm reading your mind
You won't needs to tell
I just need to see

That look in your eyes
Reading you mind
