

Breathe, be still, be free
 I was too lost in the way that others perceive me
 To remember that being oneself, is supposed to be easy
 So it resulted in embarrassment mostly
 Socially uncomfortable, verbally clumsy
 It's a young man's farce, slowly, but by and large
 Everything would change with the rain in Bang Saray

We are born and raised as cattle to be the same
 But we are not the same, we have to change
 And if we don't, we'll suffocate
 Won't we?

The world has changed
 I awaited poise and autonomy
 Assured that it would come to me - a matter of chronology
 And I guess, looking back on those years
 I didn't know what was wrong with me
 Go on and let yourself bruise
 We all need to learn how to lose

We are born and raised as cattle to be the same
 But we are not the same, we have to change
 And if we don't, we'll suffocate
 Won't we?
 You're not angry cause you're not listening
 We are not the same, we have to change
 And if we don't, we'll suffocate
 Don't wait

One never reaches home until kind paths intersect
 And then the whole entire world will change itself to look like them
 For every altruistic, solicitous man and woman that I've met
 It was my distinct pleasure to have met you and to have shaken your hand
 You will never be forgotten
 You're each part of who I am
 Your kindness

Mother, won't you forgive me?
 And Father, won't you listen to me?
 And Brother, can't you hear the sound?
 The march of time draws closer now

We are born and raised as cattle to be the same
 But we are not the same, we have to change
 And if we don't, we'll suffocate
 Won't we?
 You're not angry cause you're not listening
 We are not the same, we have to change
 And if we don't, we'll suffocate
 Don't wait
