Wild Love

Herman's Hermits

Why are these teardrops still falling from my eyes? You'd think by now I'd be wise Those words you whispered just won't leave me yet I still can hear you sighing, All love will be undying And I keep trying to forget

Would've been Should've been Could've been a wild love

How very clever it must have made you feel To know your kiss was never real And though it's over My heart won't let you go I hear your sigh and laughter In every beam and rafter Forever after I'll still know

Would've been Should've been Could've been a wild love

I still can hear you sighing, All love will be undying And I keep trying to forget

Would've been Should've been Could've been a wild love