

Heart Beats

Hey Marseilles

We left winter behind
Shorter days and long nights
For all that was holding us back
From people we knew we would find

Open air wears you thin
They say you'll love again
But love's an equation to them
Get out what it is you put in

I will look back
I will hold fast to this

Your heart beats for another day
I still believe you love me but in a different way
The night falls, the city lay asleep
Among the crowds, we both know you're my only dream

I'm starting to see where we went wrong
The lives we lead will leave on their own
You can't climb so high and still see the ground
You're on your way, I'm on my down

Looking back where we were
There's no way to be sure
Things could've gone other ways
That you'd follow me to today

We'll take up separate lives
And in the space that divides
I'll reach for the best of what was
And leave all that wasn't behind

I will look back
I will hold fast to this

Your heart beats for another day
I still believe you love me but in a different way
The night falls, the city lay asleep
Among the crowds, we both know you're my only dream

Your heart beats for another day
I still believe you love me but in a different way
The night falls, the city lay asleep
Among the crowds, we both know you're my only dream
