

Milligrams For Migraines

Hidden in Plain View

I feel deserted in her eyes like I'm floating in red seas set your sails, catch a breeze Under early morning sky's she drives far away from me set your sails, set me free she rolls the window down and she screams an awful sound twenty miles down she's found her voice It travels in the wind and breaks my walls down, breaks me in breaks me down, it breaks me in I'll be leaving all the lights on wondering where you've gone I'll be sleeping with the lights on all the while you're gone

So simple your life gets the more running through your head you know, its day by day its how life goes constantly alone, familiar places are unknown, the clocks always ticking too slow Its not that my hearts breaking, its not that my mind is aching its the shaking of my hands the constant shaking. no one understands So I pull the window down and I scream an awful sound Calling out to you.

when you find your way, if you find your way I'll be waiting Leaving all the lights on.
wondering where you've gone,
I'll be sleeping with the lights on all the while your gone