

Wearing Thin

Hollow Front

Spare me our fabled tragedy
Thinking that I could change your mind

You've got me lost inside this headspace
I'm stuck in the clouds and I'm not coming down
I have to stop myself from staring
When I get lost in your eyes, but you feel nothing in mine
Just one time (One time) I wish that I could replace
The one that's holding my place beside you
This line (This line) was reserved for your name
But I've lost faith in the way I've loved you
(The way I've loved you)

Spare me our fabled tragedy
I laid it all on the line and wasted so much time
Thinking that I could change your mind
I opened up my heart for you to break me
It's wearing thin
And I'd give anything to let go of this pain
Erase what's been
Tell me why I can't forget you

I can't hold onto hope that our paths will collide
(That our paths will collide)
Here I'll stand, heart in hand, without a pulse to stay alive
Stay alive

What hurts the most is how truly scared I was of you
And all the time I spent overthinking
Drowning inside my own sick and twisted mind
Peace in you is something that I can't find
I think it's time for me to let go
I'll miss you more than you could ever know
I'm sorry for the things I've never said
You're the best friend that I ever had

Spare me our fabled tragedy
I laid it all on the line and wasted so much time
Thinking that I could change your mind
I opened up my heart for you to break me
It's wearing thin
And I'd give anything to let go of this pain
Erase what's been
Tell me why I can't forget you

It's wearing thin
Erase what's been
