A Fine Line

Hootie & The Blowfish

There's a curve in the highway just south of town Where a man has pulled over to figure life out With only his conscience and the lonesome sound Of diesels windin' up the grade

He's got a wife and two kids, they love him so And a woman down in georgia, she startin' to show He's damned if he leaves and he' sure damned if he don't And he wonders how life got this way

('cause it's) a fine line in between right and wrong (yeah) he's been crossing over that border way too long He shoulda seen it comin' at him right from the start Now there ain't no escape from a broken heart

Now the call of the highway is a powerful thing Like the pull of a lover or a child in a swing He gave his heart to two women, only one wears his ring They're both gonna have his babies now

So how do you confess what words won't explain He never intended to cause this much pain Now he feels like a farmer who went prayin' for rain And got that he bargained from the clouds

He'll turn his care around tonight Go home and try to face the truth Everyone involed's getting hurt And there ain't nothin' he can do

He should sseen it comin' at him right from the start Now there ain't no escape, now there ain't no escape From

Now there ain't no escape from a broken heart Yeah they're all gonna wind up with a broken heart Nobody's getting' out without a broken heart
