

Is It Enough

Hope Tala

I know I care about peace, know I care about black power
Fewer police, more poetry and more flowers
Shout when I speak, I couldn't get any louder
'Cause I know that I'm free, no use being a coward
I care about love and I think it's the reason
That we'll rise above all the violence and cheating
Yeah, it's in our blood, all of this love
But is it enough
To know what we're fighting for
To know what we're fighting for
When we can't break down the door, door, door?
Least we know what we're fighting for

I think we should all be a little more tender
Should love who we want to, regardless of gender
And be who we are, shouldn't have to pretend and Women should rise up and never surrender
Hope that one day we'll protect one another
Put down our blades and start loving each other
Is there a way we can stop running for cover?
Is it enough
To know what we're fighting for
To know what we're fighting for
When we can't break down the door, door, door?
Least we know what we're fighting for

'Cause every time that I turn on the news
A different rhythm, a similar tune
Got me thinking, what is there to do?
'Cause I know courage isn't bulletproof
But every time I look up at the moon
I know the power is ours to use
We might stumble but we'll never lose

I care about love and I think it's the reason
We'll rise above the violence and cheating
It's in our blood, all of this love
But is it enough?
