Hotel Books

I know you've been alone for a while
You hide behind that half-hearted smile

You used to fear a nuanced opinion, now it's so blunt you can finally capture a moment

If it ever existed, whether it be love or hope

If telling the truth is no longer in the group's interest then the individual will no longer see the value in telling it

That's where we're at now, when the dictions will scream out loud

And you said, "If someone loves you, that doesn't mean they have to save you, but you still expect them to

And that's just the truth"

There's a light inside of me

Searching for the light inside of me

There's a light inside of me

Searching for the light inside of me

I love you

Rebellion feels like an addiction, and would we wanna break the rules, we will

'Cause there's a thrill, but if no one teaches us what the rules are, we won't know what to break

So we'll destroy everything, and we'll take it 'til we have nothing

And it's not a way to live, but through this it's all I've learned

You can disagree with someone but you can't lift them out of your heart, or turn

'Cause life is too precious

To hate someone is not cultured, or even meaningful

And you cannot drink poison expecting someone else to die

So let go of all your broken lies

I wish I would learn sooner

The only recourse should be integrity

There's no weapon in hand so you don't have to worry about an enemy

'Cause we will all die, and we will all live forever

'Cause we will all die, and we will all live forever

We will all die, and we will all live forever

Whenever you're ready, we'll all live life together

There's a light inside of me

Searching for the light inside of me

There's a light inside of me

Searching for the light inside of me

I love you
